

Mātauranga Māori Qualifications and Assessment Standards

Field Māori gives national recognition to mātauranga Māori. It is one of the classification fields for the Directory of Assessment Standards (DAS) that caters specifically to Māori knowledge, pedagogy and skills, and enables the portability of Māori skills and knowledge within the national education system.

This image depicts Field Māori. The disciplines, or subfields, within Field Māori are represented by pou (pillars) in the whare (meeting house) where knowledge is nurtured. The four cornerstones are Reo Māori (the Māori language), Tikanga (Māori traditions and customs), Ngā mahi a Te Whare Pora (traditional weaving), and Whakairo (traditional carving). Field Māori qualifications are evaluated with the Mātauranga Māori Evaluative Quality Assurance tools (Te Hono o Te Kahurangi), to ensure they meet the needs of whānau, hapū, iwi, and Māori communities.

There are more than 30 Field Māori qualifications currently listed on the NZQF and 500 standards listed on the DAS.

Mātauranga Māori certificates and diplomas

New suites of Mātauranga Māori qualifications have been developed as a result of the mandatory qualification reviews. These qualifications are predicated on a Māori World view and have been developed in consultation with whānau, hapū, and iwi; and with the guidance and expertise of Governance and Working Groups.

Information about the new mātauranga Māori qualifications is available in the pamphlets below.

Unit standards

Field Māori unit standards are developed, reviewed and maintained by external panels in partnership with standard setting bodies. NZQA's Māori Qualifications Services team works with Whakaruruhau to set national Māori standards.

Māori Qualifications Services helps facilitate the development of these standards, provides assessment resources for tutors, and promotes the uptake of mātauranga Māori qualifications.
