Resource C: Models for Health Promotion

Behavioural Change Model

The behavioural change model is a preventive approach, and focuses on lifestyle behaviours that impact on health. It seeks to persuade individuals to adopt healthy lifestyle behaviours, to use preventive health services, and to take responsibility for their own health.

Self-empowerment Model

This approach seeks to develop the individual's ability to control their own health status as far as possible within their own environment. The model focuses on enhancing an individual's sense of personal identity and self-worth, and on the development of 'life skills'.

Collective Action Model

This is a socioecological approach that takes account of the interrelationship that occurs between the individual and the environment.

This model encompasses ideas of community empowerment and commitment to improve the societal structures that have such a powerful influence on people's health status.

The Ottawa Charter for Health Promotion

The Ottawa Charter for Health Promotion provides a framework for many health-promotion initiatives, based on five main principles:

1. building healthy public policy
- 2.
- 3.
- 4.
5. re-orienting health services.

The Bangkok Charter for Health Promotion

The Bangkok Charter builds upon the Ottawa Charter to guide health promotion in a globalised world. It is based upon five main principles:

1. advocating for health, based on human rights and solidarity
- 2.
- 3.
- 4.
5. partnering and building alliances with public, private, non-governmental organisations, and civil society to create sustainable actions.

Te Tiriti o Waitangi / The Treaty of Waitangi and Health Promotion

The Treaty of Waitangi has been identified as the founding document of Aotearoa / New Zealand, and as a key to health promotion in this country.

Treaty principles and provisions that are of particular relevance to health include:

Partnership

Refers to ongoing relationships between the Crown (the Government, or its agencies) and Māori.

Participation

Emphasises Māori involvement in all aspects of society within Aotearoa / New Zealand. Within health promotion, this includes involvement of Māori stakeholders in the planning, delivery, and monitoring of programmes.

Active protection

Recognises that the Crown needs to be proactive in health promotion and the development of preventative strategies – for example, providing additional resources so that Māori are able to enjoy equitable health status with non-Māori.
