QUESTION

Interdependence is the cooperation between people and organisations for their mutual benefit. This means people and organisations are linked and depend on one another to do their part so that community well-being can be improved.

Explain and justify how the various participants involved in Feed the Need's charity programmes are interdependent, and how their participation enhances each other's well-being in the short- and long-term.

In your answer include:

- examples from Resource Booklet 90960R
- the relationships between participants (children, youth, parents and sponsors)
- the families' nutritional knowledge and cooking skills
- the dimensions of well-being.

PLANNING (OPTIONAL)*Individual and family well-being

How Feed the Need's Winter Boost, Youth AND Feed the Whānau programmes could improve well-being:
