INTRODUCTION: Intimidation

To intimidate, means to frighten or overawe someone – especially to subdue, influence, or get what you want.

RESOURCE A: Section 21 of the Summary Offences Act 1981

The following is an excerpt that defines the offence of intimidation under New Zealand law.

Intimidation, obstruction, and hindering Police*21 Intimidation

- (1) Every person commits an offence who, with intent to frighten or intimidate any other person, or knowing that his or her conduct is likely to cause that other person reasonably to be frightened or intimidated,—
- (a) threatens to injure that other person or any member of his or her family, or to damage any of that person's property; or
  - (b) follows that other person; or
  - (c) hides any property owned or used by that other person or deprives that person of, or hinders that person in the use of, that property; or
  - (d) watches or loiters near the house or other place, or the approach to the house or other place, where that other person lives, or works, or carries on business, or happens to be; or
  - (e) stops, confronts, or accosts that other person in any public place.

RESOURCE B: Bullying of youth in sport*Stop youth sports coaches who bully by recognising techniques they use to avoid blame

Although plenty of coaches use affirming and encouraging coaching styles, negative behaviour such as demeaning, shaming, and name-calling remains a common aspect of coaching in sports at any level.
