Don't have to look for a parking spot. Don't get stuck in a traffic jam. Healthy, cool. Make yourself look eco-friendly. Protect environment.
(b) Possible evidence showing understanding of how Thomas would promote cycling as a good way of getting around.	 Great for getting around a city. You can cover 10–20 km. 	 Mostly even faster than if he was in a car. Especially in mornings and evenings when so many cars are on the road. Also good for bike rides in the countryside. There are good cycle paths, which make long trips possible. You can see beautiful landscapes. 	 You can see beautiful landscapes – beside rivers, lakes, and the Baltic Sea. At the same time, you can look after the environment by not using a car (even if you can't afford one in the first place).
(c) Possible evidence showing understanding of the advice Thomas would give to a politician to help his cause.		 This is good for health, economy (saving money), protecting the environment. People cycle for sport, to save money, to protect the environment. 80% of all families have at least one bike. 	 Because more and more people are cycling, more cycle paths need to be built to reduce the number of accidents. Then even more people would cycle.
