(c) Explains personal, interpersonal, and societal strategies that could provide more equitable outcomes for Tom, others in the scenario, and the school community, considering the influences and consequences explained in (a) and (b):

- Personal strategies, e.g.:
 - Recognise that this school 'tradition' is not helpful, or inclusive, in the 21st century.
 - Positive self-talk strategies.
 - Seek help / guidance.
 - Make the decision to take a stand against the school's policies.
 - Research how the school is discriminating against same-sex partners.
 - Research similar stories and gain confidence in backing himself to challenge the status quo.
 - Research schools that have made changes to their policies and gain an understanding of how to start the process.
- Interpersonal strategies, e.g.:
 - Form an "acceptance" group.
 - Seek guidance from teachers, counsellors, the Year 12 Dean, and / or the principal about the school's policies.
 - Speak to the principal of the girls' college about their policies around same-sex partners attending formals.
 - Speak and express concerns to peers.
 - Join / start a self-awareness support group / programme.
 - Challenge social norms about gender discrimination.
 - Talk to people at school, do a survey, and gauge the opinions of students, staff, and parents at the school, then present the findings to the Year 12 Dean.
 - Tweet and use social media to gain support for challenging the school rules.
- Societal strategies, e.g.:
 - The school's Board of Trustees could ask Tom to a meeting to discuss the matter.
 - The school could review their policies.
 - Use local media to set up an online poll to get the school community's feedback.
 - The school could run health-promotion workshops / seminars about discrimination in the media.
 - The Human Rights Commission could get in touch with the Board of Trustees and arrange a meeting to discuss the HRC's policies about gender discrimination, and the school's legal responsibilities.
 - A parent action group, along with concerned students, could start a social media petition and submit it to the Board of Trustees.
 - The Board of Trustees could arrange a meeting open to all parents and students to discuss the issue.
