General conditions for the programme leading to the qualification

General conditions for programme	Ngā Taonga Tākaro - Traditional Māori Games were an integral aspect of Māori culture, not only used as pastime activities amongst kin groups, but also as a form of peacemaking and relationship building between iwi and hapū very much like the practice underpinning Pa Wars today. This tradition was employed during the Second World War where Māori and Allied soldiers participated in games during downtime - one of these games was 'Te Kī o Rahi'. While in the 19th Century here in Aotearoa - New Zealand, traditional Māori games fell into disuse, in America and some parts of Europe Te Kī o Rahi was and still is being played. In recent times, a renaissance of traditional games has taken hold and the awareness and playing of the games are fast, building momentum.

All learning and assessment within a programme leading to this qualification must be carried out with respect to Te Tiriti o Waitangi and in accordance with the following, as relevant to role and activity:

- relevant legislation including Treaty of Waitangi Act 1975, Health and Safety at Work Act 2015, Human Rights Act 1993, Vulnerable Children Act 2014 and subsequent amendments.

If appropriate, learners should also be aware of, and able to successfully meet, the requirements set out in the Vulnerable Children Act 2014.

Tertiary Education Organisations developing programmes leading to the award of this qualification should have in place appropriate mechanisms and protocols, to consult, engage and involve local iwi, and/or mana whenua to provide the required context with regard to local tikanga and kawa.

Programmes should reflect the cultural and social aspirations of Māori and Pasifika learners and include culturally appropriate resources and delivery methods.

Additional guidance and recommendations for programme development can be found on the Skills Active Aotearoa website <http://skillsactive.org.nz/>.
