Summary of review and consultation process

The above qualification was reviewed by The Skills Organisation in consultation with Department of the Prime Minister and Cabinet and The National Emergency Management Agency as lead agencies. These lead agencies also consulted within their networks across the sector.

It was determined that a qualification at Level 4 for Civil Defence Emergency Management was not required and that learners would complete a series of unit standards rather than a full qualification.

This qualification is no longer required by industry and has been designated as expiring with no replacement.

Main changes resulting from the review

This qualification will expire without replacement at the end of December 2020.
